CONCLUSION

The Socio Economic Survey conducted in Beltoli village reveals critical insights into the community's living conditions and economic activities. Finding indicates a reliance on agriculture, with limited access to education and healthcare resources. The survey highlights disparities in income level and employment opportunities, underscoring the need for targeted interventions. Community members expressed a desire for improved infrastructure and vocational training to enhance livelihood options. Overall the survey underscores the importance of sustainable development initiatives tailored to the unique needs of beltoli, aiming to uplift the community and promote long term socioeconomic stability. Collaborative efforts are essential to address these challenges effectively.
